FAULTY PRUNING OF SHADE TREES SCORED

Indiscriminate Trimming To Permit Stringing of Wires Is Condemned

By Warren Van Dyke
(Secretary of Highways)

HARRISBURG, Mar. 2—Indiscriminate pruning of roadside trees in the cities and towns to permit stringing of electric wires mars their beauty and eventually results in hazards to traffic.

Owners of such trees are urged to make certain that line crews not only obtain their permission to trim the branches but also to get assurance that the pruning is done properly.

A number of instances have been called to the attention of the Department of Highways' Forestry Unit where trunks and branches of trees lining sidewalks were scarred unnecessarily as wires were strung. Eventually parts of the trees died and dropped to the street, constantly menacing traffic.

Leaving stubs of main branches exposed invites insects and "sucker" growth that will weaken the entire tree. These "sucker" growths, small sapling offshoots, continue to flourish and create a condition that calls for continual pruning and cutting. Thus, the once beautiful tree has been transformed to a clump of unsightly stub growths.

To properly prune a tree, the Forestry Unit says, one should always keep in mind retention of the original form of the tree, to maintain and conserve the tree's strength, and to prevent branches from impairing wire service. A minimum of cutting is emphasized. Pruning should be done in such a manner that the vital branches are left undisturbed.

If the proper procedure is followed, there will be no need to crop continually the cluster of off-shoots that develop with haphazard cutting.

Along State highways, all pruning of trees within the limits of the right-of-way is under the jurisdiction of the Forestry Unit.

Qualified and trained tree surgeons maintain a constant checkup on all trees bordering State highways and immediate attention is given those that show signs of possible decay. Co-operation also is extended to owners of trees beyond the rights-of-way which enhance the scenic beauty of the roadside.

HERE AND THERE IN BUCKS COUNTY

At a meeting of Branch 4, American Federation of Hosiery Workers, South Langhorne, on Saturday, it was decided to return to work in the mills of Branch 4, Monday morning "under protest."

The branch takes in South Langhorne, Hulmeville, Bethayres, Hatboro, and towns along the Delaware River in Bucks county, including about 1100 hosiery workers.

Ray Thomas, of South Langhorne, president of Branch 4, told a reporter that the workers are 100 per cent against any "cut in wages," but that they are in favor of returning to work "under protest," which was done throughout the district.

Thirty-four more motorists and one tractor-operator were arrested during the past week by officers of the Doylestown sub-station of Pennsylvania Motor Police, according to the report compiled by Corporal Chester W. Reitz. Most of the arrests were for speeding, thirty-three of them having been caught for violating the 50-mile speed limit. They were all fined $10 and costs, in addition to facing a revocation of their driver's license for 90 days.

The more drastic checkup on highway travel during the past six months has resulted in a very large increase of safety on all highways. Fatal accidents seem to be on the decrease in Bucks county as well as the more serious type of accidents in which four and five people are hurt.

Sponsored by the Chalfont Community Club, a program in celebration of Chalfont Day will be given. A reciprocity luncheon will be served at noon and in the afternoon the Chalfont Junior Community Club will give a play. Hostesses on that occasion will be members of the program committee and Mrs. Robert M. Johnson, Mrs. A. W. Bates and Mrs. Wesley Massinger.

Walter S. (Fuz) Worthington, 18-year-old Doylestown High School basketball star, and leading scorer of the Bux-Mont Conference, miraculously escaped serious injury and possible death early Sunday morning when he fell asleep at the wheel of his father's automobile, while returning home on the Lackawanna Trail north of Neshaunoy.

Adolph Muller, Norristown, who is interested in the planting of dogwood trees, will speak on the subject of gardens at the meeting of the Southampton Women's Club on Thursday.

Annual reports of all committees will be presented at the business meeting.

ARREST TWO YOUTHS FOR THEFT OF ANTIQUES

Penna. Motor Police Say Both Boys Have Made Signed Confession

HELD FOR JURY TRIAL

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 2—Charged with stealing valuable antique mantelpieces, hinges, latches, locks and other antique hardware from an old Colonial house dating back to the time of William Penn, and located in Northampton Township, near Richboro, Reinhold W. Kutscher, 19, Ivyland R. D., and Edward R. Mulvey, 19, of Richboro, were arrested yesterday by Pennsylvania Motor Police of the Doylestown sub-station.

Corporal William Herman and Private Walter L. Haman, arrested the two youths. After an extensive questioning, the boys admitted the thefts and signed a written confession.

Before Justice of the Peace W. Carlisle Hobensack, here, Kutscher and Mulvey waived a hearing and were both held under $500 bail for the Bucks county grand jury. In default of bail they were committed to the Bucks County Prison.

According to Corporal Herman, the antiques, valued at approximately $250, were stolen from an unoccupied house, owned by Alfred Cope, on Wednesday night, February 23. The antiques were taken to a shop in Newtown conducted by an antique dealer, and purchased for $24. The two boys then split the money, Corporal Herman said.

Several persons who visited the Newtown shop informed Cope that they believed that some of the stolen goods was on display at the Newtown antique shop. Authorities were notified and the owner of the antique shop gave Corporal Herman and Private Haman all the details of the purchase that he had made from Kutscher and Mulvey and assisted them in making the investigation.

The stolen goods have been recovered from the Newtown antique shop. John Busso, of Rushland, who was arrested by Constable Earl Blair, of Doylestown, on a charge of driving while drunk, waived a hearing before Justice of the Peace Hobensack, Doylestown. In default of $500 bail he was committed to the Bucks County Prison. Busso was examined and pronounced "under the influence of intoxicating liquor" by Dr. John Rich, Doylestown.

MORRISVILLE WOMAN GREETED LINCOLN ONCE

Mrs. Amanda Eldridge Met The Great American in York At Close of the Civil War

ENJOYS GOOD HEALTH

MORRISVILLE, Mar. 2—Although well over the half-way mark in her 96th year, Mrs. Amanda Eldridge, 94 West Maple avenue, enjoys good health and goes up and down stairs a number of times every day.

Her eyesight is impaired so that she is unable to see to read but she spends much of her time in sewing, knitting and crocheting and she has a number of beautiful quilts which are her own handiwork.

Mrs. Eldridge, whose husband, the late Smith H. Eldridge, served in the Civil War and was badly wounded in the Battle of Gettysburg, met Abraham Lincoln and shook hands with him at York, Pa., at the close of the war. She had gone to that city to see her husband, who at that time was in a hospital there and he was to take part in a parade that President Lincoln was in that city.

Mrs. Eldridge resided for many years in and around Imlaystown, where her husband, before and after the Civil War, was engaged as a miller.

In speaking of transportation, Mrs. Eldridge related the many changes that have taken place and said that while some years ago she had a great desire to take a ride in an airplane, today she would decline such a trip. The horse and buggy and the automobile are fast enough for her, she said. Mrs. Eldridge also declared that the winters today are not nearly so severe as they were when she was a girl. Born July 7, 1842, at Old Morrow Run, then located between Robbinsville and Windsor, N. J., Mrs. Eldridge has lived most of her life in New Jersey, but came to Morrisville some years ago when Postmaster Burgher moved here with his family from Trenton.

The Clark Candidacy

PROBABLY the position in which Senator Bennett Clark, of Missouri, finds himself this year, in which he must run for re-election and re-election, has done more to dispel political fear of the President and promote independence among Democratic Senators than any other single thing.

NO OTHER situation makes the talk of Administration reprisals against recalcitrant Senators seem as ridiculous or minimizes the value of such White House inducements as Mr. Roosevelt gave Senator Barkley in Kentucky, or his son James, who, it is claimed, has sold more insurance in four years than any other man in the

He pictured Dictator Stalin as a "culture," ready to sweep down upon a strife-torn world and warned that America is the one bulwark against universal Bolshevism.

Loot Taken From Savage Brothers Establishment Is Valued at $1500

ALARM NOT WORKING

NEWTOWN, Mar. 2—Merchandise valued at $1500 was stolen from the store of Savage Brothers, early yesterday morning. The loot was comprised of men's and boys' clothing and it was hauled from the Savage store in a brown sedan. One man was seen leaving the establishment, but it is believed there were more than one involved in the theft.

Entrance was gained by breaking glass out of a rear window, unfastening the lock and then once inside the place, the door was opened so that the merchandise could be easily carried from the place. A burglar alarm with which the store is equipped was not working at the time.

The robbery, it is believed, was committed between two and three o'clock and was discovered at eight o'clock when the establishment was opened for the day's business.

The list of missing articles include: Seventeen all wool suits for men, size 42; 13 all wool suits for men, size 40; six all wool suits for men, size 39. Fourteen men's suede jackets, zipper type.

Camera Club To Hold Photographic Exhibits

Members of all classes of the school of photography have been banded together and have formed a permanent organization known as the Bucks County Camera Club.

The following officers were elected: President, S. Trautman; vice-president, G. Elmer; treasurer, J. Poulette; secretary, E. Tomlinson. E. MacWright, instructor, was elected Club Advisor. Committees were appointed to work on various programs of activities planned by the Club, among which are several photographic exhibits, one to be held on March 15th at Bridgewater and another on March 21 in Newtown. These exhibits will be open free to the public so that anyone interested may enjoy the fine work accomplished.

Exhibits will be held later in Bristol, Bowman's Hill and Quakertown. The pictures will embrace many branches of photography including street scenes, portraits, action, landscapes, still lights and human interest shots of all kinds. This showing will be the first of its kind to be held here. All entries will be wholly and only the work of members of the school, and in view of the fact that the school is just entering its second successful year, it is quite surprising to see the kind and quality of the work being done.

SCOUT LEADERS IN SESSION HERE FOR TRAINING COURSE

S. Kurtz Hingley, Philadelphia, Lectures on "Marine Life As One Travels the Delaware"

A. B. STILES SPEAKS

Robert Geiger, of Andalusia, Instructs in Red Cross First-Aid

Last evening, the leaders of the Cub Packs, Scout Troops and Seacoast Ships of the Lower Bucks and Delaware Valley District gathered at the Bristol Presbyterian Church for their monthly leadership training course. Field Commissioner of Training Jack Burgess of Morrisville was the chairman.

S. Kurtz Hingley, Philadelphia, delivered one of the lectures in the Seacoast Leaders course on "Marine Life as one travels along the Delaware," and Field Commissioner A. B. Stiles, of Croydon, spoke for the other hour session on "Educating parents, and meeting the girl friend interest of young men."

Field Commissioner of Health and Safety Robert Geiger, Andalusia, instructed the men attending the American Red Cross first aid course. Sixty-five traits of youth from nine to twenty-one were discussed in the course conducted by Scout Executive William F. Livermore on "Youth Leadership." It was part of the topic of "Youth Solving Youth Problems." The other hour presentation was "Keeping Junior Officers leading."

During the evening Cub songs were sung to familiarize the men with the younger boy program of Scouting for lads nine to eleven years of age. The inspiring "Living Circle of Cubbing" was the concluding event of the Scouting University sessions. It was conducted by Neighborhood Commissioner Joseph Kish. Prior to "The Circle," Mr. Kish dramatized the desirable way of introducing a new Cub by having the co-operation of the new Cubmaster of Andalusia, Edward Settle.

Eldon Sowers, supervising principal of the Lower Makefield Township School was one of the speakers of the "Principles of Leadership" course. He spoke on "Reading." It was his thought, "Reading must be on the level of the youth being interested." Reading suggestions were books that include: animal stories, travel, frontier life, legends, history, sea stories, handicraft books, etc. Good reading can be judged by unity, right craftsmanship, agreeable emotional tone, effectiveness, artistry in appeal, truthfulness, refinement of fundamental human aptitudes, and proper orientation.

"The Intelligent Scouting Leader is the one who guides his boys through their efforts to adjust themselves to life," said Neighborhood Commissioner David Neill in his lecture on "Unit Administration." Capable Scouting Leaders should go before their committees and lay before them suggestions for the operation of their Units. Good Units are noted for a high attendance, excellent percentage of advancement, most of their members in uniform specially the Leaders, patrol or crew activities, gentlemanly conduct, good morale, an active outdoor program, and regular Junior Officer's meetings.

The values from "Ceremonies in Scouting" were presented by Neighborhood Commissioner Joseph Kish, Andalusia. His suggestions were to "Use ceremonies to develop an inspirational approach to citizenship, human beings need to have situations that are romantic and will stir their emotions, and they should be enthused with their patriotic responsibilities with a moral determination and with spiritual aspirations." "Good ceremonies stimulate both thought and emotion. They provide a basis for an intelligent and sympathetic conception of one's duty to God, to his Country, his neighbor and himself."

Bristol leaders present were Wilbur Campbell, Leonard Dyer, John Field, Fred Herman, Winfield Herman, Robert L. MacDonald, Joseph McLean, Herbert A. Pettit, Jr., Herbert A. Pettit, Sr., Ralph Riccio, Dominic Russo, Lewis Smith and Edward Tosti. George C. Geiger, Edward P. Settle and Jesse Wendkos came from Andalusia. Edgely was represented by Clyde W. Nash. WEDNESDAY, MARCH 2, 1938

AMERICAN INFLUENCE

The march of world events in recent weeks and days has indicated that nations grow by accretion, and that the ideology of nations may be as formidable as their mobilized arms. Thus foreign hostility may often ghost-walk in the sinister guise of domestic infiltration, effecting, like a powerful virus, the preliminary violence of forceful onslaught.

The day after the European stage resounded with the proclamation of Fascist triumph on the continent, what may without prejudice be considered somewhat of a nationalist sideshow was instanced in South America with the inauguration of President Ortiz of Argentina. The official American silence regarding the significance of Fascist ascendancy in Europe found somewhat of an emotional outlet in our government's felicitations of good will to Argentina, bidding for a closer bond of appreciation of American ideals in the South American republics.

President Roosevelt sent an encouragingly impressive message, and Secretary Hull further paraphrased the American good will understanding existing between our southern neighbors and the United States previously underscored in the memorable economic conference of December, 1936, at the Argentine capital of Buenos Aires.

This somewhat muted answer to the totalitarian challenge of Fascism that threatened to shake the world may well have prophetically sounded over future South American policy as a vigilant promulgation of American ideals to offset the unconscionable impenetration of destructive foreign philosophies. It is to be hoped that the American influence, manifesting itself in co-operation, moral as well as economic, may develop the South American republics to a state of democratic consistency entirely unfertile to the seed of totalitarian unrest.

Incidentally, that may well be regarded as the proper consciousness indicated for North American democracy as well. The American system will endure only insofar as it is solidly grounded against vicious deterioration by covert foreign malefaction. The American influence, to be abiding, must be rooted in the heart-depths of American democracy. The spiritual defense is the breastwork in advance of national determination against foreign pre-emption of America by termitic tactics of Old World propagandism. Its psychology is deeper founded than in the Monroe Doctrine.

PERSISTENT BUSINESS

The will to live is an instinct of mankind, and of all other manifestations of nature. In fact, the will to exist may be called the first instinct. And the will to live which keeps business going sometimes is a thing marvelous to behold.

Despite excessive taxation and restrictive regulation and all the other impediments and hurdles placed in the path of business enterprise by the concentric circles of officious government, from the village and town and city to the county and state and nation, business strives to be busy. In New York State, for example, according to the figures of the state industrial commission, one type of industrial gains is more than offsetting losses.

The increase in industrial units in the state has been used as an argument to defend the new minimum wage law, most recently by the New York City regional director of the National Labor Relations Board, to take punitive steps in his direction.

ALL OF WHICH lends significance to the political facts as they exist today in Missouri. It is said that in the entire history of the State there has never been a situation paralleling Senator Clark's at this time. He already has the outspoken endorsement of every faction and every Democratic leader of importance in the State. In addition, such Republican leaders as Jesse W. Barrett, nominee for Governor last year, and Arthur Curtis, Republican National Committeeman are supporting him. It seems that the Republicans will have only a nominal candidate against him and many of them do not want even that.

THE FACT is that an early movement among Republicans formally to endorse Senator Clark was dropped only because of the chance it might give some Democrat to enter the primaries and make trouble for Senator Clark by charging that he was a Republican. The trouble would not have been serious, out Senator Clark's friends didn't want any. As things now are there probably will be no candidate at all in the primaries against him. His renomination is considered and, while in 1932, his majority was about 500,000, there is every reason to believe this time it will be even more. The prediction is that he will be re-elected by a greater majority than any candidate ever got in the State for any office.

ALTOGETHER his is a rather extraordinary felicitous position and its contemplation from the White House hardly can be pleasant. All idea of opposing Senator Clark with a New Deal candidate now has been abandoned. The reason for the abandonment was solely because there was no way to "get going," and it is certainly significant of the change since the 1936 campaign when no candidate felt safe unless he was clutching Mr. Roosevelt's coat tails. Among other things, it seems to mean that the Missouri delegation to the 1940

"EXTRA FARE"

by Edna Robb Webster

CHAPTER XIX

Opposite the station door Kirby stopped and asked, "Will you pardon me for a minute while I run in and send a wire?"

"Of course," she agreed blithely. "I'll mail my copy and get a paper while you are gone."

A newsboy leaped forward at her glance, and beamed happily when she refused the change from the dime. "Thanks, Miss. I sure do like to meet dese extra-fare trains. I kin make good use of 'em, too."

"How's that, Sonny?" Jaxie prompted with amused interest.

"Well, you see my ma's got T. B., so we brought her out here to get well, and I have to help pa take care of her. Pa can't make so much here as he did in New York. But I like it here. Don't you just love these here mountains, Miss? I don't want to go back home ever, where it's so noisy and hot."

"I hope you never have to go back, then. And you take this to buy something nice for your mother, will you?" She pressed a folded bill into his chubby hand.

"Aw, gee, but you're nice!" His tanned face shone with pleasure. "Thanks a lot, Miss, and I'll tell her about seein' you."

The engine bell clanged warning, and Kirby joined her hurriedly. "All aboard," he warned.

Jaxie patted the boy's shoulder. "Goodbye, sonny, and good luck to you and your mother," She smiled. "I hope the mountains keep you here." She turned to Kirby. "Did you send your message?"

He nodded, but his eyes intently watched someone farther down the platform; then he sprang up the steps after Jaxie as if he wished to avoid being seen.

For an instant apprehension assailed Jaxie and she cast about for some comment that would prompt Kirby's confidence without too obvious a display of curiosity. She spoke the first words which came to her mind. "You are horribly extravagant about sending telegrams. That's the third time I have seen you go into a telegraph office today. You must think a lot of some girl friend back in Chicago."

"There isn't a girl I know to whom I would send a telegram—except you," he declared. "And I won't have to do that for a couple of days."

"If ever," she countered. "I hope you never have to be so far away." His eyes met and held hers and again she felt a delightful suggestion of dizziness.

The train gathered speed and hurried on into the night, climbing higher toward the next stop at Trinidad. For a half hour, the passengers were absorbed with the latest news in the papers which they had carried aboard. Their varied interests indicated more concerning their characters and pursuits than the casual observer might have supposed.

There were those who turned instantly and feverishly to the stock reports; others anxiously and hopefully sought racing results. Some looked with leisurely interest for the sports pages; a few of the women turned to the household page, though they had left household cares behind them for the time; the fashion column attracted others to whom household cares always would be a grubby responsibility to be passed on to others; announcement that the government proposed a reduction in the appropriation for financing unemployment relief was gratifying to some and shocking to others. Suggestions for increased taxation alarmed those whose taxable possessions were threatened; the crafty ones whose investments were cunningly devised to shift the burden of government to other incomes sat back placidly and increased their dinner orders.

But the subject of general discussion wherever two or more people sat together was the headline item concerning the Chicago embezzlement. By some means, either direct or indirect, a half million dollars' worth of negotiable bonds was being transported across the country to the west coast; or they already had been turned into cash and the money was on its way to a west coast exit from the country. And it was believed that the absconding bank-employee accompanied the fortune. Most of the reports were vague conjecture, however.

The men in the club car were voluble and confidential. The male passengers of car 74X had congregated there to enjoy their after-dinner smokes and their newspapers. Harry Bortin swaggered before his small audience with the vindictive remark—as he glanced up from a studied perusal of the front page—

"Funny thing that the government takes away a third of our income to run this country, and then lets all the crooks slip through its fingers. They're all crooks, when it comes right down to it," was his grim accusation. "If they'd get a few honest fellows into office, things would be a lot different and we'd have protection inside and outside as well."

"Who's going to be the almighty judge to pick the honest men?" asked the quiet little man with the gray beard.

"Why, the honest people," Bortin retorted with vague wisdom. "But they don't have a chance. The crooks and a half—the crooks who are after the money and the rich guys who have already reaped the profits. Talk about democracy and freedom!" He snorted disdainfully.

A slight smile twisted the compressed lips of Mervin Gaines. "Just how would you propose to operate this democracy, then, with success? We all seem to be able to criticize, but not to offer a remedy."

"One man can't begin alone and do a job right that thousands have been going at wrong for a century and a half." Harry dismissed his responsibility with contempt. Kirby had listened with amused interest. "You referred to the rich guys who were crooks. Just whom do you place in that category? I notice you are several jumps out of the breadline yourself, or you wouldn't be on an extra-fare train on your honeymoon."

"Oh, that's all Marie's notion—and her money that pays for it, you can bet. Her uncle gave us the trip for a wedding present, or you can just believe we wouldn't be here. Even if I had the money, I wouldn't be squanderin' it like this. But she'll have to settle down and be sensible when we do get back home again."

"Then it must be the rest of us who are crooks," Kirby offered facetiously, as he looked from one to the other of his companions. He turned to Gaines, who sat next to him. "I hear you belong to a pretty good racket—the movie game. You must be able to knock down a pretty fair graft, yourself." He winked humorously.

Gaines responded easily. "I manage fairly well—and keep out of jail. How do you stack up?"

"You don't see any handcuffs on me, do you, even if I do fancy that I feel their grip occasionally." Kirby answered the man in his own bantering tone.

The little man glanced sharply from one to the other of them, and remained silent.

Jake ventured to enter the conversation, recognizing the sort of jocular wit to which he was accustomed when he gathered with his neighbors for thrashing jobs or church socials. "Well, they ain't no flies on me, boys, an' I reckon I pay as much taxes 't help run this here government as anyone does. I own a whole section of the best grazing land in the state of Iowa, and considerable personal property, beside. Fact is, I'm involved in this here crime in Chicago, only I'm on the other side o' the fence. Some o' them bonds is mine, and I'd like 't be one of a posse to catch that scoundrel and lynch him." His keen eyes darted about the group to meet those of each member, as if he were searching out the criminal from among them, ready to spring at his throat.

Each individual drew back a little without volition, from the lash of his words and the threat of his voice.

The bland stout man who had shifted his sleeping quarters to accommodate the bridal pair spoke for the first time. "Well, we're all under suspicion, every westbound passenger, and you're one of us."

Jake's eyes flamed and he rose up a little from his seat in his perturbation, shaking his gnarled, knotted fist. "What d'you mean, I'm under suspicion? By heck, they ain't no buddy kin class me with a criminal, even if I am ridin' in the same train with him and don't know it!"

The cinema director, as if accustomed to handling mob scenes, human drama and emotional genius with calm superiority, laughed pleasantly and placed a restraining hand on the old man's arm. "That's all right, uncle. The gentleman wasn't insulting you. Didn't he include himself when he said we all were under suspicion? We're all in the same boat—or on the same train, westbound. But there's safety in numbers, at least. There must be a few thousand people in the same predicament at this minute—westbound. You shouldn't mind it, if we don't."

Like hundreds of other suburbanites, they solved their entire heating problem with automatic gas house heat.

Best of all, it costs this family and many of our customers much less than they anticipated. Let us make a survey now and estimate the cost to you. MORRISVILLE COPS LAURELS IN LOWER BUCKS CO. CIRCUIT

Bulldogs Defeat Bristol By Score of 18-15 in Play-Off Tilt

BIG CROWD ON HAND

Game Was Full of Thrills and Kept Crowd on Edge of Seats

(By "Herm" Corn)

Last night in the Trenton Central high school "gym" the Morrisville Bulldogs captured the Lower Bucks County laurels in a nerve-racking and breath-taking tilt when they vanquished the Red and Gray basketballers of Bristol to the tune of 18 to 15. This fray was played before a highly-spirited group of spectators.

During this season the Bunnies and the Bulldogs have met three times in basketball fashion. Twice of the three the Blue and Gold hit the ringing cords more than the Juergemen to enable them to rate tops in the Lower County Circuit.

The game was immediately "hot" at the snap of the referee's whistle. Morrisville's ace center and point-guarder, Ed Reitzle, opened the scorebook tabulations when he laid away his deadly pivot shot. Bristol was not left undaunted as Pete De Luca and Wilbur Van Lenten made good their two and one foul tosses, respectively. Then Bill Gallagher added two more to the locals' total when he made the circular pill go through the hoop with its familiar "swish." After Reitzle again completed his pivot, the first period came to an end with the Red and Gray ahead by a 5-4 count.

The second period gave Morrisville the lead, with Reitzle and Johnson each sharing scoring honors with three counters. Bill Gallagher led the Bunnies attack also by tallying three notches. In this chapter the field of play was nip and tuck as the scoring routine still continued to be a see-saw affair. The score at the half: Morrisville, 10; Bristol, 9.

The next to the last period was merely defensive play on the part of each team. One team would bring the ball up the floor, only to lose it in a scramble under the basket, and so on. However, it finally ended with a 12-12 deadlock.

The start of the last quarter spelled the Red and Gray Waterloo. In this section Morrisville took advantage of her breaks and her set-up shots to win by an 18 to 15 score.

With no doubt at all, the most credit should fall on Bill Gallagher, southpaw ball handler, for his fighting effort that he made to carry the colors of the Red and Gray high and wide. He was "big-game" shooter for the Juergemen quarter when he caged four two-counters and one foul for nine points. Far below comes Captain Pete De Luca, who although he failed at the field goal route, made good his charity tosses to net three points. Silvio Florito was the only local who scored a field goal besides Gallagher.

For Morrisville, Reitzle was the outstanding picture. He practically made up their team both in offense and defense. He belted four field and one foul for nine points. Johnson visited the basket second greatest times with his two double-deckers and a gift throw for five tallies.

Track's Old Man River

By BURNLEY

"A MILE HEADWIND FOR MORE THAN 7 YEARS—THIS SEASON HE IS AGAIN THE MOST CONSISTENT INDOOR MILE!"

That mechanical man of foot racing, Glenn Cunningham, has again shown himself to be one of the seven wonders of the world.

Once again he has been the most consistent winner of the indoor season, running the opposition into the ground with robot-like ruthlessness.

Ever since 1932, when barrel-chested Glenn was the first American to finish in the Olympic mile at Los Angeles, this iron-lunged Kansan has been one of the world's top-notch milers. At different times during his career other milers have outdistanced him, but over the years Cunningham's consistency makes him the top man on our all-time list of milers. Lovelock and Bonthron used to beat him at times, but where are they now?

Venzke and San Romani are among the few runners still competing who have had decisions over Glenn, but the Old Iron Horse has emerged victorious in the majority of clashes with both of these arch-rivals.

Track experts are already predicting that Cunningham will be our mile mainstay in the 1940 Olympiad if, by that time, he still chooses to run. An Olympic "third timer."

MORRISVILLE HAD BEST OFFENSIVE COURT TEAM

By Louis Tomlinson

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Mar. 2

Winners of practically all team and individual honors Morrisville could heap upon themselves in coping everything in sight last Fall in the Lower Bucks Conference grid campaign. Coach John Hoffman's boys also proved themselves capable of handling a basketball as well as a pigskin. This fact was shown in a glance at the statistics.

Not only did Morrisville show team spirit and fight in coming from behind to tie Bristol for the league leadership and thereby necessitating a play-off, but also displayed the best defensive and offensive aggregation in the circuit, as proved by the statistics given below. The Bulldogs out-scored all league opponents by a total of 40 points while at the same time, they held the opposition to 47 less points than did any other outfit in the conference. In gaining this achievement, Morrisville rolled up a combined total of 356 points in ten games to their opponents 134. These were garnered via 154 field goals and 48 fouls, to only 45 double-deckers and 44 fouls for the opposition in league play.

The Bulldogs' nearest rivals for these honors were Bristol and Fallsington. Whereas the Cardinal and Gray five were the second best defensive team in the league, Fallsington was in the same position for the offensive power shown by them. Fallsington had held the lead in team scoring up until the final week of play, when the Blue and Gold quietly stepped past them by chalking up a half a hundred points against Buckingham in their last tilt, while Falls could hang up only 35 against Bristol in the season's finale. A grand total of 316 points looped the cords for the Do-heny-coached crew, scored on 135 floor shots and 42 from the foul line. Coach Steve Juenger's boys achieved second honors in defensive work by allowing the other five teams only 181 counters in ten tilts, these being accounted for on 67 field goals and 47 free tosses.

Fallsington placed second with their offensive strength, they took third honors on the defense. At the same time, Bristol came in second on the defense and third on the offense. The Cardinals stuck up 119 double-deckers and 16 gift throws for a total of 284 tallies to 316 for Fallsington. On the other hand, the third placers allowed their opponents 90 shots from the floor and 30 from the foul line, which resulted in 230 points scored against them to 181 against Bristol.

The offensive strength shown by the second division clubs is quite even, but there is a huge margin separating their defensive work.

Bensalem's Owls showed more scoring power than any other team in this group by counting 205 tallies, via 78 field goals and 49 fouls. Buckingham was next with a four-point edge over Southampton who finished at the bottom in this department of the game. The Buccaneers racked up 192 points, while the Greyhounds garnered 72 two-pointers and 44 single counters for a total of 188 markers for the season. Although they were the league's lowest scorers, Southampton showed a pretty fair defensive club in view of their position in the final standings. Only 261 points went through the hoop against them or 31 more than scored against Fallsington. These were scored on 106 field goals and 43 charity tosses. Bensalem had 319 tallies racked up against them, scored via 127 double-deckers and 65 free shots, while Buckingham had the worst defensive club, having had no less than 416 counters rung up feat handed to them by Southampton on the home floor.

In going back for a moment over the scoring records of the first three clubs in the final standings, we find that approximately two-thirds of the points scored by these clubs were garnered at the expense of the trio of second division clubs in five contests. While Morrisville scored 231 to 57, Fallsington counted 212 to 161, and Bristol 162 to 88 in two games against both Buckingham and Bensalem and one against Southampton.

Against these three clubs, Buckingham had a total of 103 to 39 points registered against them by Morrisville, 107 to 31 by Fallsington, and 89 to 36 by Bristol for a grand total of 290 of the 416 points counted against them all season to 57 scored by themselves in six games against the three top clubs. In their six tilts against the same three clubs, Bensalem was able to chalk up only 100 points to their opponents' 228. Morrisville scored 97 to 23 points in two tilts against the Owls, while Fallsington chalked up 79 to 39, and Bristol 61 to 38 at the expense of Bensalem. Southampton, on the other hand, had the best record of the three last place teams against the three first place teams. The Greyhounds registered a total of 83 points to 178 for the three top teams. Morrisville counted 63 to 14 against them, Fallsington 59-44, and Bristol, 56 to 25.

Morrisville, of course, sunk the most field goals in their ten tilts, counting 154 such shots, while none other than Buckingham, who were the best foul shooters in the league sunk in the highest total of free shots in sinking 54. At the same time, the Buccaneers had the low total of only 32 fouls counted against them. Bensalem had the most gift tosses scored against them when the opposition tossed in 65 of this variety, while Buckingham had the most double-deckers scored against them, 192 all told. The Bulldogs had the least number of two-pointers scored on them, allowing only 45 of such shots hit the cords by the opposition.

JOE DUSEK TO TANGLE WITH DYNAMITE JOE COX

TRENTON, Mar. 2.—The "Grappling Duseks" collectively and singly, one of the mat game's biggest drawing cards, go into action tonight at the Arena in one of the best mat programs ever staged by Promoter Johnny Ipp.

Joe, rapidly displacing Ernie as the trouble shooter of the family, will tangle with Dynamite Joe Cox, Missouri toughie, in a return match. This will be the feature brawl, one fall to a finish, with no time limit. They fought last week and after over an hour of fast and furious action, Dusek emerged the victor. It was one of the few defeats suffered by Cox in his career and tonight he will be seeking revenge.

Ernie, captain of the "riot squad" as the Duseks are known, takes on Mike Mazurki, Manhattan College Pole, and one of the "hottest" wrestlers to appear here this season. Mike downed Floyd Marshall and Wee Willie Davis, the two biggest men in the game in successive weeks.

Rudy, the eldest of the group, faces Jack League, one of the classiest newcomers to tread the Arena canvas. In his last two bouts, League downed George Koverly and Joe Maynard.

Wally, newest member of the clan, meets Ralph Garibaldi, also of a noted grappling family.

In the opening contest, Andy Rascher, popular Indiana athlete, faces Maynard, Chicago, a rough and tough matman.

Iron, Steel and Der Fuehrer

Some of the iron and steel with which Adolf Hitler recently threatened to enforce Germany's demand for colonies is shown above, during an army review in Berlin. Der Fuehrer can be seen through the helmets and bayonets of the honor guard which greeted him at the Kaisersdam Exhibition hall.

Financier on Stand

Bernard Baruch, New York financier and friend of President Roosevelt, is shown as he gave the Senate Unemployment Investigating Committee his views on economic conditions. In his opinion, the government must shoulder the burden of relief as long as employment lags.

The first bout will start at 8:30 p. m. and ladies will be admitted free to the ringside section accompanied by a male escort.

BRISTOL J. V. GIVES BENSLEM A LACING

Bunny Juniors took their third win at the cost of the Blue and White when they trounced the visitors by a 26 to 11 count. It seems as though Coach Bruce Gillard has introduced to his basketballers the act of passing the ball very successfully.

Soaring Boake Carter again shows the Red and Gray the way to their basket by leading off with a double-decker. He also sank three other double-deckers to lead his team with the total of eight points. He was closely followed by Dick Doyle and Joe Ciarella, each registering three double-deckers for the count of six points each.

White led for the visitors with six points as accounted for by one field goal and four accurate foul shots which were donated by members of the Red and Gray.

STENGEL BELIEVES BEES GOOD AS IN 1937

(Note: Herewith is the fifth of a series of International News Service staff correspondents on the forthcoming major league races. Today, the Boston Bees.)

By James Bagley

(I. N. S. Sports Writer)

BOSTON, Mar. 2.—(INS)—"Although there are not many outstanding prospects, we should at least finish in the same spot as last season—fifth place," said Casey Stengel, new manager of the Boston Bees in preparing to open Spring training at Bradenton, Fla., for the year 1938 National League pennant campaign. The best looking prospect on the eBees' roster is Max West, 21-year-old slugging outfielder from the Mission Club of the Pacific Coast League, who, Stengel believes, will furnish the much needed batting punch in his outfield.

Vince DiMaggio, brother of the famous Joe, and Gene Moore will round out the outfield. The veteran Roy Johnson, Deb Garmis, and Jim Southern, up from Zaneville, also are battling for berths in the outer garden.

Stengel said he knows the Bees' defensive strength was responsible for them finishing at the top of the second division last season and the main problem will be to get some offensive strength if they hope to do as well again.

Jim Turner and Lou Fette, freshmen twins, turned in 40 victories last year, the first time this was ever done by two first year men on the same club.

With the veteran Danny MacFayden, Frank "Gabbo" Gabler, Ira Hutchinson, and Johnny Lanning, who has shown some promise the past two seasons, Stengel hopes to round out a strong pitching staff.

A couple of minor league veterans are looked upon to help the Bees. Milt Schoffner, who came to the Bees near the close of the campaign, did some fine pitching. Johnny Niggeling, 30-year-old veteran from Newark, is expected to be used in relief roles.

Gabler, obtained from the Glants a year ago, and Hutchinson, a big right-handed fast ball pitcher, are looked to by Casey to be of great assistance this coming campaign.

The infield will be broken up this season depending on the ability of Joe "Tweet" Walsh, shortstop from the Little Rock Club to make good. Tony Cucinello who is slowing up, will be moved over to third base. Rabbit Warstley will shift from shortstop to second base and Elbie Fletcher will be on first.

Earl Maggart, listed as an outfielder and infielder, from Ashville, Bob Kahle, a shortstop from Indianapolis, are considered the best of the new infielders who have a chance of sticking.

The catching staff again will be headed by Senor Al Lopez with Ray Mueller expected to share the burden.

LAST "DING DONG"

RAINIER, Ore.—(INS)—The familiar "ding-dong" of the fire bell which summoned fire-fighters and rang the curfew in Rainier for 23 years had sounded for the last time today.
